I have a Word document I've created and at the bottom of it is a page break. I've added several pages of content to the document and saved it. However, when I opened the document up, all the content from the document I just saved was on the first page. There was no way to tell Word to stop printing the first page. I tried to find a solution online but could only find how to remove the page break. Is there a way to get Word to stop printing the first page? A: Insert > Page break (Page Layout > Breaks) > Break at first page of the document. Or, if you have multiple pages of the same content, insert > Page break (Page Layout > Breaks) > Break at a page that you can safely put the top of the page. A: It is a guess. Open the document with Windows Explorer (maybe with a terminal) Open the first page Print the page If this doesn't do the trick, you can also try to Ctrl+M (or with the keyboard shortcut). A: Open the doc in Word, not Explorer. If you do it in Explorer, then MS Word will treat the doc as one long file. This can happen even if you saved in Explorer and have Explorer show the entire doc. The best solution, especially if you have
