Organized garden design tool This kitchen garden aid provides you with an organized garden design environment where you can easily navigate through your garden's planning process by relying on the complete support that it offers. Design mobile garden plans Your garden design will be more streamlined when you use the application, as it allows you to create fully customizable garden plans. Compatible and incompatible species You can use the application to plan your garden, while also monitoring the plant life and its characteristics. Of course, there is more to it than that, as this software allows you to view additional tips and tricks in relation to the species that you wish to incorporate into your garden. Decide plant removal While keeping up with a plant's characteristics is important, it is sometimes necessary to remove it, or take some other action that is not set in stone. With kitchen garden aid, you can easily end up with the planned design, which is the ideal plan for any kind of garden. Track seed health You can use this garden planning tool to track the status of your seeds, which will help you assess their growth, stress level, nutritional level and the rest of the information that is available for their respective species. Create garden layouts Before you plan your garden, it is possible to create multiple layouts and compare them side by side. Organize your garden in sections The application provides you with a garden map, which is useful when you wish to view the garden at a glance. Plan multiple gardens By design, you can create many variations for your garden, which can help you evaluate which one is the best for you and the rest of your family.

Harshnet (software) Harshnet, formerly known as HarshScope is an application and web-based network performance testing tool developed by Harsh Software. It was the first and currently only commercial network testing software that allows network device performance to be compared at a detailed level of deep packet inspection to help companies find problems in their networks. Harshnet is a network performance test platform that contains tools that can be run on a laptop or desktop. This platform can be configured by network administrators to have different Network Address Translation (NAT) ranges (up to 2000 unique hosts), unique MAC address ranges, or unique IP address ranges. Harshnet can perform tests on the following protocols: TCP UDP ICMP IP IPv4/IPv6
